BEER CHIEF JUDGE'S REPORT - SIMON FAHEY

On behalf of the 2016 Royal Adelaide Beer and Cider Awards Committee and all the judges, I warmly welcome you to this year's awards.

The Royal Adelaide Beer Awards were established in 1844 as part of the wine judging. Beer judging continued annually until 1913 when it prematurely ceased. In 2011, The Royal Adelaide Beer Awards were re-commenced. The awards aim to recognise the importance, quality, the uniqueness and the promotion of the Australian beer industry.

These awards can provide an opportunity for brewers to reach new markets both in South Australia and interstate and to benchmark themselves against other brewers.

I was once again honoured to be selected as Chief Judge for 2016. My role as Chief Judge is to ensure that the process of judging is run in a smooth manner and is of a high standard. This year we ran two concurrent panels and I was ably assisted by Tony Jones who was the second panel leader.

I have judged in numerous beer competitions over my 29 years in the brewing industry and I was privileged to have led this group of 12 judges over a 2 day period of judging. This year the judges came from the Australian brewing and several allied industries and these companies allowed their valuable employees the time off to spend judging on a volunteer basis. The judges assessed and scored each exhibit on their commercial excellence, their quality attributes and their trueness to type. Each exhibit was assessed and scored individually and privately with feedback returned back to the brewer. Judges use a 20 point scoring system and the score determines the medal for each exhibit.

This year saw a record breaking 171 beers entered, with increased entries in US Style Pale Ale, Stout and Reduced alcohol classes.

The judges that have been with me since 2011, all agreed that the overall quality of entries has vastly improved over the years with only a small number of entries this year showing major faults.

Regretfully, this will be my last year as Chief Beer Judge, so would like to take this opportunity to thank all the sponsors, judges, and exhibitors who help mould these awards over the last five years. I look forward to my continued association with RABCA and I thank our awards committee and all involved at RA&HS. Thanks also to my hard working Chief Steward Neville and his team who all carried out their roles with much professionalism.

I look forward to seeing you all at the Beer and BBQ Festival.

Cheers to great Aussie beers!

Simon Fahey Chief Beer Judge 2016

Cider (and I include perry or pear cider) has definitely re-established itself as a popular drink in the hotels, bars and restaurants of Australia and continues to grow in both volume and diversity. This year's competition had less entries, but I am pleased to say that proportionately more medals were awarded. An interesting reflection on the ciders entered.

I should thank our panel of judges, comprising a range of experienced cidermakers from South Australia and one from interstate, for their time, their palates and their expertise. We sniffed and tasted our way through the ciders and the overall impression was that cider is improving year on year. There were less significant issues and more smiles and medals.

Interestingly the gold medals remain elusive, but I am confident that they are on their way.

Cider judging protocol draws from both beer and wine judging, acknowledging that cider as a drink falls somewhere between the two. As with the beer judging each competitor receives detailed feedback from each judge on their ciders. Hopefully this is a useful tool to help in refining style and direction.

Thank you all the exhibitors who entered, for putting forwards their ciders.

Behind the scenes the stewards and staff of the RA&HS also deserve thanks for running a seamless show that I suspect might belie the behind the scenes action.

Cheers to areat cider!

This is our IPA glass.

This glass was developed in a sensory workshop in collaboration with two of the leading Indian Pale Ale brewers in the United States: Sam Calagione of Dogfish Head and Ken Grossman of Sierra Nevada. Through this process, we discovered one shape in particular showed the best balance of aroma and flavour.

Our IPA glass enhances the generous floral and citrus aromas that IPAs are famous for, whilst the uniquely shaped base maintains and recharges a fresh frothy head with every sip, delivering full hop flavour and perfect malt balance.

It is the new standard for IPA glassware.
